Fred Says—

The self-employed person has more would-be bosses than anyone else on earth.

Setting aside the irritations of the day, and allowing free scope to the imagination, Iris breeding appears as an ever wider, and more fascinating, field. As many have discovered especially of late.

While we do not have a show-place, we do enjoy our hobby-workshop. Iris—Azaleas—Daylilies. The Azalea seedlings being a comparatively recent addition. From the finest named "Exbury" hybrids, and reportedly hardy to 20 degrees below zero, these Azaleas are due for wide distribution when better known. Foliage, ornamental. Size and color of flowers, wonderful. Blooming with the Iris, they create somewhat of a problem in maintaining two hybridizing programs simultaneously!

We are hoping for a favorable season, and anticipate enjoyment of it to the utmost. Especially the convention period. Also, hope for a good seed crop this season. So many avenues yet to explore.

No doubt someone is due to find the answer to "red." It may appear as a surprise, as an over-the-years development, or from a combination which we might have seen all along,—and didn't!

In all probability you are equally interested in the bordered varieties. Merely thinking of possibilities along this line is exciting.

And there is the ever present amoena challenge. Who may be the first with a white-standard, pink-fall beauty! Or a truly white and red. We have the distinctly different Cook amoenas, and who can say the extent to which these fine varieties can be put to use.

Also, beards have come into their own. This detail can make an amazing difference, in the quality of a flower. It has been some time since anyone has been heard to suggest that the bearded Iris might be more attractive minus the beard.

Hoping to see you during the convention, and meantime—good luck to you, and may all your Iris dreams come true!

Postscript

So many, many "ads," we know—

On billboard, T.V. and radio,

In the paper, in the mail—

"Buy the product," without fail.

A wailing horn, a ventriloquist,

Or cool guitar, you can't resist.

The fastest gun, a fizzing pill,

Comanches racing down a hill.

Magicians, jugglers, a dog or two,

A wildly cavorting kangaroo.

Cha-cha, calypso, and comic boys,

Every type of song, and noise.

Astronauts, a distant goal—

It's yet IRIS from IRISNOLL.
